ARENA STAGE MISSION

Arena Stage is the voice of American theater resident in our nation’s capital. Focused on American artists, our productions are innovative and representative of stories from across the country. We nurture new plays and reimagine classics. We celebrate our democracy and diversity through a multitude of voices in our productions and community engagement programs to inspire people to action. We produce all that is passionate, exuberant, profound, entertaining, deep, and dangerous in the American spirit.

Arena Stage is built on the land of the Piscataway people of the Algonquin-speaking tribes, as well as the lands of the Native American people of the greater Anacostia, Potomac, and Tidewater regions.
In the early 1970s, my sister Bridget and I went to a women’s consciousness-raising session weekly in a friend’s living room near Catholic U. We talked about our bodies and read eye-opening books like Our Bodies, Ourselves as most of us already subscribed to Ms. Magazine and many read Betty Friedan’s game-changing book. Mostly we talked and laughed and cried and learned and listened to our individual and collective stories about being a woman and feminists. Those sessions forever changed my life. I was in that circle of women who got to know each other over a single year, and we had this place to reveal our deepest secrets.

When Roe v. Wade was struck down by the Supreme Court a few months ago, to say I was devastated is an understatement. Here we are in this country without an Equal Rights Amendment for women; my sex is still not making the same amount of money as men; and now this most sacred choice—the choice about our bodies—was ripped away. Women once again have been relegated to second-class citizens.

I thought, what can I do about this horrifying decision? I woke up one morning with: “Of course, I’ll make a theater piece.” I wrote to some of my favorite writers and some new writers too, to see if they wanted to write monologues about the choices women either have made or cannot make about our own bodies. I was so pleased that six writers answered me within 24 hours...

This is the final play I’ll direct as your Artistic Director, and I’ve chosen to set it in a consciousness-raising space—with one important distinction. In the 1970s these spaces were secret, but now we are opening the stories up to all of you. Our secrets keep us sick. Our shame keeps us sick. Our fears keep us sick.

Before 2015, when marriage for same-sex couples was ruled on by the Supreme Court, legions of gay people told their families and friends and neighbors that they were gay. This secret-telling normalized difference. I believe that women need to tell their stories now. It’s time to remove our fears and to speak out.

To help spread the stories, we have reached out to theaters and universities around America to join us by hosting readings of the play during our run, October 20 – November 6. Check out arenastage.org/mybody for information about where these readings are taking place in all corners of the country.

In our lobby, go into the Whisper Room if you have secrets you want to tell, or take a sticky and post on the Kogod Cradle wall to share a choice you’ve made or haven’t been able to make about your own body...

... And please vote! Knock on doors! Shout it from the rooftops! We created My Body No Choice to perform right before the midterms, for only 18 days, charging $18 a ticket, because of the symbolism of the age of 18 as the legal age to cast a vote.

Our votes have never been more important.

The difficult times of the pandemic forced introspection in many ways. I was fortunate to have had the opportunity to convene (through a thoughtful and meaningful course, called “Convene,” led by TRG Arts) with other art makers from around the world. I took many valuable lessons from that time, including striving for resiliency, as you may have read in notes from other shows this season. Another was to teach myself to look at life through a lens of abundance rather than scarcity. Neither of these are easy a lot of the time.

For instance, when faced with a moment in time when a personal right that had seemed to be solid and fundamental is being questioned and outright taken from women, it is challenging to find a view of abundance and resilience.

Molly tells her personal impulse for My Body No Choice eloquently. Some have questioned, with a negative manner uncharacteristic of Arena’s audiences, why Arena would undertake this piece.

Arena is not attempting to enforce a specific stance. As befitting Arena’s mission to “produce all that is passionate, exuberant, profound, entertaining, deep, and dangerous in the American spirit,” we are a platform for American voices and stories. You are witnessing a sampling of the stories of American women here today. Stories that are often not shared broadly.

One purpose of this art form is to engage with complicated ideas. Hearing stories like these relies on empathy. Sometimes we all must be reminded to be—and how to be—empathetic.

Every person has a backstory. Every person woke up this morning with a myriad of worries about a variety of concerns that is not evident to others. All struggling to find that resilience to make it through the day. The stories in My Body No Choice are impactful opportunities to feel the effects of significant reinterpretations of laws on the individual. They are meant to embrace our empathy and put our lives in the context of someone else’s backstory. To raise consciousness and awareness.

These stories have varied points of view, and none are trying to tell anyone specifically to think one way or another. It’s an opportunity for theater to do what it does best—tell important stories that speak to our world and our time.

Thank you for joining us today. I find a renewing of my resilience in our ability to gather and share a collective consciousness.

Molly Smith is a theatrical force of nature. But I didn't know that in 1998 when I headed to Arena's Board Chair Steve Bralove’s home to meet her. I had joined the Arena Board five years earlier, because I loved theater and thought Zelda Fichandler, Arena’s Founding Director, created the kind of theater I wanted be part of. To say that I walked up the driveway that night with a healthy dose of skepticism about this final candidate would be an overstatement of my attitude after my underwhelmed reading of Molly Smith’s bio.

That skepticism was the mistake I would make often over the next 25 years.

My first meeting with Molly taught me that this gutsy woman had both the capacity to face overwhelming challenges and the imagination to envision successful outcomes. After all, I thought, she did drag 50 theater chairs from Washington, D.C., to Juneau, Alaska to start the successful Perseverance Theatre.

Molly and I were friends by the end of the night.

The Arena Artistic Director Search Committee had requested that Molly present them with a vision for Arena that would put us back in the spotlight as the one of the nation's premier regional theaters. As the first of what would become a vibrant 80-theater community, Arena had lost its “premier” brand. Molly envisioned Arena as the home of American voices and American work. I worried we would lose further subscribers without the works of international classics and the London West End innovators.

Molly’s vision was right; today, Arena is the center of American theater in the nation’s capital. And she broke the glass ceiling for women playwrights, too!

During her tenure, Arena nurtured American voices from Pulitzer Prize-winning or -nominated playwrights Lynn Nottage, Katori Hall, and Lisa Kron. In fact, she brought a coterie of women playwrights to Arena’s stages including Anna Deavere Smith, Karen Zacarías, Paula Vogel, Mary Kathryn Nagel, Sara Ruhl, and V (formerly Eve Ensler).

Molly and I share a political viewpoint—usually!

Not only does Arena speak for America, but Molly’s Power Play commissions tell many of the untold stories of each of the 25 decades in America’s history. From John Quincy Adams’ unsung presidency to JFK’s assassination, Arena is revealing our national controversies and questions to an audience ready to absorb to new works. Before this initiative, Arena very rarely produced premières.

But then there is The Originalist, the story of Antonin Scalia and his African American, lesbian law clerk.
By the time Molly undertook this John Strand Power Play, I was a nervous Board Chair who worried that our liberal audience would reject the entire season when they heard about this one. Again, I was wrong. So much so that, when Broadway theaters wouldn't even read it, I agreed to produce it. It played to sell-out audiences off-Broadway and landed a Broadway theater just before COVID-19 shut us down.

To move, or not to move?

Arena’s historic Harry Weese brutalist building in Southwest Washington was creaky and in need of repair when Molly arrived. I was among the Board majority who thought we should move to the newly re-developed Northwest 7th Street corridor. When the Board decided to stay in Southwest, Molly articulated a need for a bold new vision so that Arena could lead the forgotten quadrant to become the nation’s hottest destination. She hired architect Bing Thom to design today’s beautiful, iconic, winding glass building.

American musicals re-imagined launch the new Arena Stage!

Musicals were not the foregone conclusion I expected from our builder of the American voice-American artist vision. While Molly credits her love of live theater to her own exposure to musicals, she was a child of the ‘60s who rejected musical theater as not serious theater. Molly took a chance with Rodgers and Hammerstein's South Pacific and discovered the subversive power of the only American-created theater form—the musical. This “late bloomer” infused her smash-hit productions of Fiddler on the Roof, My Fair Lady, Anything Goes, and a long list of others with her own sensitivity to the play's contemporary cultural impact.

Molly opens the new Arena Stage home with Oklahoma!: I Object.

Of course, Molly would reopen Arena Stage at the Mead Center for American Theater with a musical, but I thought Oklahoma! was a serious mistake. “Everyone knows it, played in it in summer camp, sang it,” I pleaded. But after extensive research into the Oklahoma of the 1880s, Molly brought the diverse culture of the times in Oklahoma and America now to life in the must-see production that brought even the harshest theater critics to standing ovations.

So much for the arrogance of this Board member’s skepticism.

Molly, indeed, produced her anticipated revitalization of Arena’s neighborhood and secured Arena’s reputation both locally and nationally. During her tenure, Arena supported the development of Tony Award-winning musicals including Dear Evan Hansen and Next to Normal, Pulitzer Prize-winning works such as Sweat and Next to Normal, and nurtured hundreds of new works and productions nationally.

Mea Culpa, Molly!

Pain is both private and political.

MOLLY SMITH (Conceiver and Director) has served as artistic director since 1998. Her 40 directing credits at Arena Stage include large-scale musicals, like Catch Me If You Can, Anything Goes, Disney’s Newsies, Carousel, Fiddler on the Roof, Oklahoma!, My Fair Lady, The Music Man, Cabaret, South Pacific; new plays, like Celia and Fidel, Sovereignty, The Originalist, Camp David, Legacy of Light, The Women of Brewster Place, How I Learned to Drive; and classics like Mother Courage and Her Children, A Moon for the Misbegotten, The Great White Hope, and All My Sons. Her directorial work has also been seen Off-Broadway at 59E59 in New York, Portland Center Stage, Canada’s Shaw Festival, The Court Theatre, The Old Globe, Asolo Repertory, Berkeley Repertory, Trinity Repertory, Toronto’s Tarragon Theatre, Montreal’s Centaur Theatre and Perseverance Theater in Juneau, Alaska, which she founded and ran from 1979-1998. Molly has been a leader in new play development for over 40 years. She is a great believer in first, second and third productions of new work and has championed projects, including Dear Evan Hansen; Next to Normal; Passion Play, a cycle; and How I Learned to Drive. She led the re-invention of Arena Stage, focusing on the architecture and creation of the Mead Center for American Theater and positioning Arena Stage as a national center for American artists through its artistic programming. During her time with the company, Arena Stage has workshopped more than 100 productions, produced 39 world premieres, staged numerous second and third productions, and been an important part of nurturing nine projects that went on to have a life on Broadway. In 2014, Molly made her Broadway debut directing The Velocity of Autumn, following its critically acclaimed run at Arena Stage. She was awarded honorary doctorates from American University and Towson University. ARENA STAGE LEADERSHIP

MOLLY SMITH (Artistic Director) see bio on page 19.

EDGAR DOBIE (Executive Producer) Born in Vernon, British Columbia, a village next to the Rocky Mountains (three years after Arena had its first performance in 1950), I am one of five brothers raised by my Dad Edgar, a mechanic and small businessman, and Mom Connie, a telephone operator and union organizer. I am the only Dobie to make a career in theater. Luckily for me, drama was an arts elective I was offered at the tender age of 12 so I hung up my hockey skates and joined the drama class, led by teacher Paddy Malcolm and her fledgling Powerhouse Community Theater after school. By the time I graduated from high school, we volunteers had built ourselves a 200-seat, fully equipped theater on its own piece of land in the center of town and found a sold-out audience for the full season of plays we had on offer. That experience taught me so many lessons about the power of theater to foster collaboration and share meaningful stories, as well as the public values that attach themselves to building a safe place where everyone is welcome. All those lessons served me well as a managing leader and producer both sides of the border and both sides of the commercial and non-profit theater divide. Arriving here in Southwest with my good wife Tracy and our daughter Greta Lee in 2009 makes me feel like I am well-equipped to do a good job for you all.

This theater operates under an agreement between the League of Resident Theatres and Actors’ Equity Association.

The actors and stage managers are members of Actors’ Equity Association, the Union of Professional Actors and Stage Managers in the United States.

The scenic, costume, lighting and sound designers in LORT theaters are represented by United Scenic Artists, Local USA-829 of the IATSE.

The Director and Choreographer are members of the STAGE DIRECTORS AND CHOREOGRAPHERS SOCIETY, a national theatrical labor union.

Musicians are members of the American Federation of Musicians, Local 161-710.
