There are few voices that articulate the American experience with the honesty and the bittersweet beauty of August Wilson.

Arena Stage has had a long love affair with August Wilson. Arena has been producing Wilson’s work for over 30 years, starting in 1987 with Joe Turner’s Come and Gone. When contemplating our 70th Anniversary Season, we quickly gravitated toward celebrating August Wilson as an American Giant. We are pleased to feature his work through our Giants Festival all season, with two mainstage productions, a provocative series beyond the plays and brilliant artists.

We begin with Jitney, directed by the dynamic Ruben Santiago-Hudson. Many artists are returning from his hit 2017 Broadway production for Arena’s audiences. At its heart, Jitney is a story of community during a period of so-called urban renewal and the collective growth and radical changes of its members. Sound familiar? The impact of urban growth is very evident in our very own Southwest neighborhood, as the second phase of The District Wharf continues to grow and the neighborhood changes. After Arena, this production will tour to Detroit, Los Angeles, San Diego and Seattle.

Some of my cherished Arena memories include our productions of August Wilson plays: King Hedley II, Ma Rainey’s Black Bottom and Two Trains Running. Before this production of Jitney, we had produced seven of the 10 plays in Wilson’s American Century Cycle. In addition to Jitney, we will produce Seven Guitars (April 3–May 3, 2020), directed by Arena favorite Tazewell Thompson.

In celebrating August Wilson, we want to explore his impact on American theater. The August Wilson Festival (part of the “American Giants” series) will include artists discussing Wilson’s plays but also his legacy and how his work affected theirs. During the run of Jitney, there will be a panel of designers (“Building the World of August Wilson” on September 16) and a panel of writers (“On the Shoulder of Giants — August Wilson’s Dramatic Legacy” on September 28).

We have several great discussions planned as well. On September 25, Paul Tetreault from Ford’s Theatre — which is producing Fences this fall — and I will get together to discuss the challenges, opportunities and necessity of producing August Wilson in Washington, D.C., in 2019. We will be joined on the panel by Dr. Sandra Shannon, Howard University Professor Emerita and Founder and President of the August Wilson Society; and Riley Temple, scholar and theologian. On October 16, in partnership with the August Wilson Society, Arena will host a discussion on “Gentrification in Washington, D.C.” with local activists and experts Mignotae Kebede and Tony Lewis, moderated by Dr. Sandra Shannon. Additionally, on October 17, Wilson’s nephew and executive director of the August Wilson House, Paul Ellis with host a post-show discussion.

Be on the lookout for more activities in the spring around Seven Guitars. I look forward to hearing these artists and scholars share their experiences, their memories of Wilson and their insights into how August Wilson changed the world of American theater.

In our own copy describing the story being told in August Wilson’s deeply human and affecting Jitney, we highlight “the unnerving neighborhood gentrification that threatens the way we live and work.” As someone who lives and works in Southwest D.C., a neighborhood in radical transition, the lessons of this play ring true. As patrons of Arena, I am willing to bet you are feeling the changes as well with mixed emotions, but mainly joy, I hope.

Looking back six decades, we witness a brutal experiment in urban planning that destroyed a tight-knit community; our quadrant was leveled in walking distance of the HUD building when planners had hatched the planning experiment. I chose the adjective “brutal” for a reason, as much of the architecture that replaced the ramshackle and authentic homes was eventually recognized as Brutalist architecture. Not the proudest moment in our history, yet the opportunity for Arena Stage to set up shop at Sixth and Maine Southwest would not have presented itself at the end of the 1950s. Over the years, there were several different plans to revitalize the neighborhoods that did not achieve success. The arrival of the Waterfront metro station (1993), Nationals Stadium (2008), The District Wharf (2017), and Audi Field (2018) along with our own huge commitment to transform our facilities (2010) have been embraced as real progress.

To quote a study commissioned by our very own Southwest Business Improvement District (SWBID), “Over the next 20 years, the private sector will invest approximately $3.4 billion into the Southwest, more than half of that investment in the next five years, during which over 4,000 units of housing and 1.5 million square feet of commercial space are slated to deliver.” The SWBID serves our neighborhood community by maintaining streets, parks and public areas, as well as neighborhood events (farmers' markets, community suppers at the duck pond), marketing and helping residents and visitors deal with transportation issues. Arena is represented in the SWBID and we are determined to work with our fellow businesses to improve over the next decade the quality of our lives in Southwest, from residents to theater-goers and everyone in between. Parking is at the top of that list. And like patience, they both start with a P. Also starting with P is partnership, and Arena’s partnership with the SWBID and our community friends is the key to creating a safe and easy-to-travel neighborhood. I like to think you all are partners in this endeavor as well.

Hope you enjoy Jitney.

The Hill District and the jitney
by Naysan Mojgani, Literary Manager

Pittsburgh’s Hill District, where August Wilson was born and raised, has a long relationship with the jitney — the unlicensed and unregulated car services that pop up in communities underserved by more official transportation options. So it is appropriate that Jitney was the first play that August Wilson wrote in his American Century Cycle, his iconic sequence of 10 plays centered in the Hill District and relating the story of the African American experience.

The jitney arose from the 1914 recession, when the new phenomenon of used cars helped transform the unemployed into independent businessmen. The industry exploded, spreading across the country at rapid speed; the crack-down came almost as rapidly. Much like Uber and Lyft, jitneys faced regulatory scrutiny, safety concerns, and hostility from competitors (both licensed taxi companies and municipal transit services); unlike modern ride-sharing giants, jitneys had neither the organization nor the money to fight back, and by the 1920s, jitneys were all-but-extinct in most markets.

One of the few cities where jitneys persisted was Pittsburgh. Jitneys ferried Civil Rights protestors to the hospital. Pittsburgh police routinely used jitneys to get drunks home. In the 1980s, it was estimated that there were twice as many jitneys operating in the city as licensed cabs. When Jitney premiered in 1982 at the Allegheny Repertory Theatre, Wilson and his mother Daisy took a jitney to the theater. Particularly in the Hill District, this usage continues today.

The biggest reason the jitney has lasted in the Hill District is that the residents haven’t had many other options. Many people couldn’t afford a car, the area was under-served by public transit and the traditional taxis avoided the predominantly black Hill. Additionally, even when other options are available, jitneys go above and beyond; because it is an informal and human interaction, drivers form relationships with their customers and are more willing to lend a hand with things like carrying groceries and helping elderly customers upstairs. As Becker says in Jitney, “We providing a service to the community. We ain’t just giving rides to people.”

That service, and that human connection, is critical in the Hill District. Once the cultural center of black Pittsburgh, the population has plummeted over the last half-century — from almost 40,000 in the late 1950s to about 12,000 today — and those who remain lag behind the rest of the city economically — the Hill’s median household income is about half that of the city overall. Many see a deliberate effort by the city to displace and gentrify. While much has changed in the decades since Wilson wrote Jitney, the pressure the characters in the play feel from the city is not too different from what residents of the Hill face in 2019.

This is part of the wisdom of Wilson’s work; the struggles of today and yesterday and the day before yesterday are not dissimilar, and neither are the tools we use — community, perseverance, tradition, family — to endure those struggles.

Molly has been a leader in new play development for over 40 years. She is a great believer in first, second and third productions of new work and has championed projects including How I Learned to Drive; Passion Play, a cycle; Next to Normal; and Dear Evan Hansen. She led the re-invention of Arena Stage, focusing on the architecture and creation of the Mead Center for American Theater and positioning Arena Stage as a national center for American artists. During her time with the company, Arena Stage has worked more than 100 productions, produced 39 world premiers, staged numerous second and third productions and been an important part of nurturing nine projects that went on to have a life on Broadway. In 2014, Molly made her Broadway debut directing The Velocity of Autumn, following its critically acclaimed run at Arena Stage. She was awarded honorary doctorates from American University and Towson University. In 2018, she was honored as Person of the Year by the National Theatre Conference and inducted into the Washington DC Hall of Fame.

EDGAR DOBIE (Executive Producer) Born in Vernon, British Columbia, a village next to the Rocky Mountains (three years after Arena had its first performance in 1950), I am one of five brothers raised by my Dad Edgar, a mechanic and small businessman, and Mom Connie, a telephone operator and union organizer. I am the only Dobie to make a career in theater. Luckily for me, drama was an arts elective I was offered at the tender age of 12 so I hung up my hockey skates and joined the drama class, led by teacher Paddy Malcolm and her fledgling Powerhouse Community Theater after school. By the time I graduated from high school, we volunteers had built ourselves a 200-seat, fully equipped theater on its own piece of land in the center of town and found a sold-out audience for the full season of plays we had on offer. That experience taught me so many lessons about the power of theater to foster collaboration and share meaningful stories, as well as the public values that attach themselves to building a safe place where everyone is welcome. All those lessons served me well as a managing leader and producer both sides of the border and both sides of the commercial and non-profit theater divide. Arriving here in Southwest with my good wife Tracy and our daughter Greta Lee in 2009 makes me feel like I am well-equipped to do a good job for you all.

This theater operates under an agreement between the League of Resident Theatres and Actors’ Equity Association.

The actors and stage managers are members of Actors’ Equity Association, the Union of Professional Actors and Stage Managers in the United States.

The scenic, costume, lighting and sound designers are represented by United Scenic Artists, Local USA-829 of the IATSE.

The Directors are members of the STAGE DIRECTORS SOCIETY, a national theatrical labor union.

Arena Stage is a constituent of the Theatre Communications Group (TCG), the national organization for the American theater.

THANK YOU FOR LEAVING YOUR LEGACY AT ARENA STAGE

CREATE A LEGACY BY JOINING THE FULL CIRCLE SOCIETY

You don’t have to be wealthy to make a significant gift. Bequests and other planned gifts allow you the opportunity to make a significant contribution that will ensure the future of Arena Stage. For more information about making a planned gift or to inform us of your existing planned gift, please contact Maya Weil at 202-415-8600 or mweil@ArenaStage.org.

“We feel the long-term viability of theater really has to come from two sources—annual fundraising efforts and long-term donations [in the form of a planned gift] from the people who love the theater and are willing to commit to it in perpetuity.”

— Beth Newburger Schwartz and the late Richard Schwartz
