The Heiress is a play I have wanted to produce at Arena Stage for a long time. The timing had to be right and it had to be the right director. This is a classic American play, based on a classic American novella: Henry James’ Washington Square, which is also the subject of several films. This is a play for Arena Stage audiences who are lovers of the classics.

Why this play now? At its core, this is the story of a woman struggling with defining herself through others—a father, a husband. While defining oneself through other people may be a story predominantly told by women, certainly it’s a universal idea that we are not only who our parents or partners want us to be—we are individuals and our thoughts, needs, desires are our own. It can be a challenge to feel empowered.

In this time of #MeToo and the most women in Congress ever, isn’t it fascinating to see a story from the middle of the 19th century that is still painfully relevant in the 21st century?

This story definitely still speaks to us as a country and as individuals blazing our path forward. Think about other feminist plays and playwrights from the early 20th century—Ibsen’s A Doll’s House and Hedda Gabler. Lillian Hellman, Sophie Treadwell. Although a classic, this remains a story for our time.

There could be no better director for this play than Seema Sueko. Seema is an intuitive and insightful person and she is the right director to bring a strong focus to the contemporary impact of the persona of Catherine Sloper.

The creative team is impressive—and as I’m sure you noticed—all women. Here we are in the round, in the theater named for Zelda Fichandler, a story about a woman blossoming into herself, created by all women, in 2019—the glass ceiling has a big ‘ole crack, and maybe even a window.

I can feel the breeze.

Thinking about The Heiress and what remains from our presence after we leave the planet has me thinking about legacy and Arena Stage’s place in both American theater and Washington, D.C. history. How does the community recognize organizations that leave a legacy within their neighborhood or city?

The word “legacy” these days may have a white-male connotation since our nation, as a people, are doing a better job of recognizing where different cultures and genders have previously been ignored. I know going back to word definitions may seem academic, but words have meaning. I was interested to find that the definitions of “legacy” are mostly practical; a gift left by will, something transmitted or received from an ancestor or predecessor, a candidate given special consideration because of a previous relationship, or relating to or from an earlier technology.

The impact of organizations like Arena that pass from generation to generation may not, as in the case with the heiress of this story, be measured in dollars. Often it can be seen through the lens of public—not private—“treasure.” If public, then it must be husbanded by our elected leaders, public servants or trustees.

Once upon a time, an enlightened senator from Alaska championed a legacy for Washington, D.C. arts organizations, recognizing that Washington, D.C. has no state government to support its valuable private not-for-profit institutions. (A coincidence that Senator Ted Stevens hailed from Molly Smith’s home state!) Being included within the National Capital Arts and Cultural Affairs program, funded through an appropriation passed by Congress, requires meeting specific criteria such as budget size, longevity, and performances in the District of Columbia. This support is not intended to duplicate federal support from other avenues (i.e. The Smithsonian), but rather provide “legacy” institutions with general operating support so that they can continue for future generations.

Governmental support of all kinds has been under fire for decades now in many cities and states, however this type of support for specifically District of Columbia programs is particularly vulnerable. As citizens, we all value what our tax dollars go toward, and I wager that we all are most proud when we realize the extent to which our contribution to our government makes critical services like police, fire, and rescue available, as well as public parks, libraries, and protected green space. Equal in my mind to these critical services are the arts—where we can share our stories of humanity, learn, debate, sing, dance, commiserate, inspire, conspire, and so much more.

We all have an impact to make, big and small. Most of us aim high. Your presence here today helps Arena Stage protect an “inheritance” that endures in this fine piece of playwrighting interpreted anew in the graceful hands of our deeply talented deputy artistic director Seema Sueko.

*Deceased
The story at the heart of The Heiress grew from a piece of gossip.

Actress Fanny Kemble told writer Henry James about her brother, a handsome but selfish young man who got engaged to a girl he described as “dull” and “plain” with a very large fortune.

James transformed that gossip into Washington Square, a novella originally published serially in Cornhill Magazine in 1880, and used Kemble’s story to pose two central questions to his readers: what happens when a woman is raised by a father who doesn’t love her? Is it possible to love someone and also seek financial gain from them?

In 1945, Ruth and Augustus Goetz adapted Washington Square for the stage, first under the title The Doctor’s Daughter, then back to Washington Square, and finally in 1948 as The Heiress. Along the way, the Goetzes evolved the narrative. Whereas James’ Washington Square has the heiress Catherine Sloper picking up her embroidery at the end of the story “for life as it were,” condemning her to a life of solitude and sadness, Ruth and Augustus Goetz’s The Heiress has Catherine complete her last sampler and say “I can do anything now.” While we hope the audience debates whether Catherine’s final act in the play is good or bad, from Catherine’s own perspective—and the perspective of this production—Catherine is making her own choice, with freedom and agency. She isn’t a tragedy, but a courageous woman in her full authenticity.
Women’s Voices

This production builds upon the evolution of this story from a piece of gossip about a woman with no voice, to a play about a woman who finds her voice, by featuring the work of an all-female, multiracial design team comprised of award-winning artists.

The set is designed by Mikiko Suzuki MacAdams, costumes are designed by Ivania Stack, lighting by Sherrice Mojgani, sound design and original composition by Emma M. Wilk, wigs are designed by Anne Nesmith, the voice and text coach is Jan Gist, and the production is helmed by Arena Stage’s Deputy Artistic Director Seema Sueko.

A recent study on “Who Designs and Directs in LORT Theatres by Gender” by Porsche McGovern found that in the past five seasons only 0.6% of design teams at LORT theatres were composed of people who all use she/her pronouns. We are honored to increase that statistic with our production. LORT refers to the members of the League of Resident Theatres, a group of 75 major theatres in the United States. The full breakdown is pictured here:

Arena Stage has a long history of championing diversity, equity, and inclusion, dating back to its beginnings—when Zelda Fichandler, Tom Fichandler, and Edward Mangum founded Arena Stage in 1950, it was the first integrated theater in Washington, D.C.. Since Artistic Director Molly Smith came to Arena Stage in 1998, 70% of Arena's directors have been women or people of color. In the last decade, 50% of Arena's productions were written by women or playwrights of color.

“In the privacy of her room she is very expressive,”

So says the character Lavinia Penniman about Catherine to Dr. Sloper at the start of The Heiress. By the end of the play, Catherine outgrows her room. So, too, our field of American theater strives to outgrow outdated systems that have closed doors on women artists. This play, this production, this design team are a step in that direction—up the staircase, as it were, with Catherine.

Molly has been a leader in new play development for over 40 years. She is a great believer in first, second and third productions of new work and has championed projects including How I Learned to Drive; Passion Play, a cycle; Next to Normal; and Dear Evan Hansen. She led the re-invention of Arena Stage, focusing on the architecture and creation of the Mead Center for American Theater and positioning Arena Stage as a national center for American artists. During her time with the company, Arena Stage has workshops more than 100 productions, produced 39 world premieres, staged numerous second and third productions and been an important part of nurturing nine projects that went on to have a life on Broadway. In 2014, Molly made her Broadway debut directing The Velocity of Autumn, following its critically acclaimed run at Arena Stage. She was awarded honorary doctorates from American University and Towson University. In 2018, she was honored as Person of the Year by the National Theatre Conference and inducted into the Washington D.C. Hall of Fame.

EDGAR DOBIE (Executive Producer) Born in Vernon, British Columbia, a village next to the Rocky Mountains (three years after Arena had its first performance in 1950), I am one of five brothers raised by my Dad—Edgar, a mechanic and small businessman—and Mom—Connie, a telephone operator and union organizer. I am the only Dobie to make a career in theater. Luckily for me, drama was an arts elective I was offered at the tender age of 12, so I hung up my hockey skates and joined the drama class, led by teacher Paddy Malcolm and her fledgling Powerhouse Community Theater after school. By the time I graduated from high school, we volunteers had built ourselves a 200-seat fully-equipped theater on its own piece of land in the center of town and found a sell-out audience for the full season of plays we had to offer. That experience taught me so many lessons about the power of theater to foster collaboration and share meaningful stories, as well as the public values that attach themselves to building a safe place where everyone is welcome. All those lessons served me well as a managing leader and producer both sides of the border, and both sides of the commercial and non-profit theater divide. Arriving here at Arena in 2009 makes me feel like I am well-equipped for the best job in the world.

This theater operates under an agreement between the League of Resident Theatres and Actors’ Equity Association.

The actors and stage managers are members of Actors’ Equity Association, the Union of Professional Actors and Stage Managers in the United States.

The scenic, costume, lighting and sound designers in LORT theaters are represented by United Scenic Artists, Local USA-829 of the IATSE.

The Director and Choreographer are members of the STAGE DIRECTORS AND CHOREOGRAPHERS SOCIETY, a national theatrical labor union.

Arena Stage is a constituent of the Theatre Communications Group (TCG), the national organization for the American theater.

THANK YOU FOR LEAVING YOUR LEGACY AT ARENA STAGE

CREATE A LEGACY BY JOINING THE FULL CIRCLE SOCIETY

You don’t have to be wealthy to make a significant gift. Bequests and other planned gifts allow you the opportunity to make a significant contribution that will ensure the future of Arena Stage. The Full Circle Society allows us the opportunity to recognize you for that gift during your lifetime. For more information about making a planned gift or to inform us of your existing planned gift, please contact Holly Oliver at 202-600-4029 or holiver@arenastage.org.

“We feel the long-term viability of theater really has to come from two sources—annual fundraising efforts and long-term donations [in the form of a planned gift] from the people who love the theater and are willing to commit to it in perpetuity.”

— Beth Newburger Schwartz and the late Richard Schwartz
