This has truly been a season of powerful women. From celebrating the life of Zelda Fichandler to the Lillian Hellman festival, such unforgettable female giants have crossed our stages in more than one way this year.

Lorraine Hansberry is another woman that falls into this category. Despite her untimely passing at the age of 34, she gifted the American theater canon with her masterpiece A Raisin in the Sun. She grew into a pioneer for the African-American voice in theater. Her tenacity, truth and talent led to her become the first African-American dramatist and youngest woman to receive the New York Drama Critics, Circle Award.

As many of you know, we recently announced our massive Power Plays commissioning cycle. We will commission 25 new plays — a new play per decade, from 1776 to the present day — about the people, ideas and incidents that revolve around power in America. A Raisin in the Sun could be considered the power play of its time. It explores a unique perspective of American history, demonstrates the work of a brilliant writer and quite naturally is the best in its class.

Arena Stage is a place where you'll not only see new work from established playwrights and those on the cusp of their exciting careers, but also American classics demonstrating how they are just as timeless and relevant as the day they were written. In my opinion, this is one of the most exciting times for creating and producing theater.

Though this play is the most decorated and noted of Lorraine Hansberry’s work, this is Arena’s first time producing this classic. A Raisin in the Sun at its roots is a story of the American dream — the story of what that dream looks like when the odds are against you and you’re left with no choice but to dream audaciously. American politics are being looked at in new ways around the world, and the American dream we all covet is being called into question. To consider the Langston Hughes poem that inspired Lorraine, has the American dream been deferred or is our country’s search for true equity and prosperity just beginning?

With that, I invite you to join myself and the Younger family on the path toward that dream. The talented Tazewell Thompson and his gifted collaborators will show the way. May we as Americans continue to be emboldened to chase our own American dream.

All Best,

Molly Smith, Artistic Director
There is no question that A Raisin in the Sun is one of the greatest classics in American theater. It's one of those works that has managed to withstand the test of time because of its relatable themes and the eloquent way it highlights the highs and lows of African-American life during a time of uncertainty. I have an unbelievable amount of respect for the way Lorraine Hansberry could articulate the struggles of African Americans, and what it meant for the Younger family to chase their American dream. To give some insight on that perspective, let's think about what was happening in the world during the late 1950's and where Arena Stage was on its journey during that time.

Telling stories that reflect different facets of American life is the cornerstone of our work here at Arena. The 1950's represents a time when a gallon of gas was a quarter, and suburban living became idealized. Owning a home bordered by a white picket fence was the dream quickly becoming a reality for many American families, but the binds of segregation made this dream nearly impossible for families in the African-American community. A Raisin in the Sun is loosely based on Lorraine Hansberry's experience with housing segregation on Chicago's Southside, and how her family took initiative to chase a dream entitled to all Americans, regardless of class or skin color.

A Raisin in the Sun premiered on Broadway March 11, 1959, and that same evening Arena was opening a production of Sean O'Casey's The Plough and the Stars. 1959 was a very transformative year for Arena. The organization needed to find a streamlined way to increase revenue and embark on a journey of finding a permanent home. In October of 1959, the Washington Drama Society was born. This new non-profit organization would allow Arena to receive larger gifts and government grants. This shift also enabled Arena to begin conversations about moving to the Southwest neighborhood of Washington, D.C. During the 1958/59 season, three Arena directors, including Zelda Fichandler, received $10,000 Ford Foundation grants. Overall, these grants were used to assist in the organization's creative development, but Zelda chose to use her grant to make sure the resident artists were paid a decent living wage.

While it's difficult to believe that this is the first time Arena has tackled this brilliant production, we are excited to bring you into the Younger's home for this story of audacious hope, and what it means to chase the American Dream.

Thanks for listening.

All Best,

Edgar Dobie, Executive Director
THANK YOU to the generous members of our Usher Corps who not only contribute their time, energy and effort throughout the season, but also continually support our mission by giving to our Annual Fund. Gifts to the Annual Fund allow us to maintain the highest quality work on stage and provide vital arts education programs for young people throughout the region.

The support of our Usher Corps is invaluable to the continued success of Arena Stage! While we appreciate gifts of all sizes, space only permits us to list contributions of $100 or more. The following are contributors as of February 28, 2017.

THE AFRICAN-AMERICAN FAMILY: THEY HAVE A DREAM

One of the truly heartrending stories in American history is the heroic struggle of African slaves and their African-American descendants to keep their blood kin together as family and community units. It is a story of enormous resilience — and pride of family and tribe — that is not heralded nearly enough in American history books.

At the heart and soul of their story are their dreams. Dreams about the lost homeland. Dreams about a new home of freedom and renewal. Dreams about a safe place for their children to run as fast, and fly as high, as their unshackled imaginations and unburdened souls will take them. Dreams about survival for their people, biblical in dimension, and still a work-in-progress in the second decade of the 21st century!

Torn from their homeland and familial tribes and stripped of their cultural traditions, languages and religious rituals, they were then faced with centuries of persistent, unrelentingly brutal, often lethal, attacks on their spiritual, emotional and physical integrity. They were robbed of their freedom, and their continued existence threatened. During captivity and enslavement, they were sold, resold and scattered across the American South. Men, women, children, brothers, sisters, parents and grandparents were routinely and systematically separated for profit — yet they still dreamed and prayed to be together again one day, in a place called Freedom!

From the beginning of this horrific enterprise in human trafficking, they fought with ceaseless valiance and great ingenuity to find their lost ones, and find a way to keep them together as family in community with their racial and cultural brothers and sisters. This human endeavor continued during the Civil War, Reconstruction, post-Reconstruction, Jim Crow, the Great African-American South-to-North migration beginning during World War I, and on through the Vietnam and Counter Cultural Wars, the advent of drug culture and modern Civil Rights Movement with its great advances in civil and voting rights, all in conjunction with the negative assaults on young black men through police brutality and mass incarceration. Yet they still dream that BLACK LIVES MATTER!

The Youngers, the proud aspirational working class African-American family in Lorraine Hansberry’s A Raisin in the Sun, are part of that long journey to find freedom and a place called home. The dreaming continues...

“Seem like God didn’t seem fit to give the black man nothing but dreams – but he did give us children to make them dreams seem worthwhile.”

-Tazewell Thompson
Director, A Raisin in the Sun

CREATIVE

LORRAINE HANSBERRY (Playwright) became the youngest American playwright, fifth woman and only African-American to date to win the New York Drama Critics' Circle Award for Best Play when A Raisin in the Sun appeared on Broadway in 1959. In its authentic depiction of Black American life, the play made it impossible for the American stage to ignore African-American creativity and subject matter thereafter. In 1961, the film version received a special award at the Cannes Film Festival and a Screen Writer's Guild Award nomination. In 1965, Lorraine died of cancer at age 34. Her second Broadway play, The Sign in Sidney Brustein's Window, was in its early run when Hansberry died; the curtain came down on that date. To Be Young, Gifted and Black, an autobiographical portrait adapted by her former husband and literary executor Robert Nemiroff, was posthumously produced in 1969 and toured across the country. In 1970, her play Les Blancs ran on Broadway to critical acclaim.

TAZEWELL THOMPSON (Director) is an international opera and theater director, playwright and teacher. Opera productions in Madrid, Paris, Milan, Tokyo, Cape Town, Vancouver, San Francisco, D.C., Los Angeles, Detroit and New York. Since 1988, he has directed 18 productions at Arena Stage, including Caucasian Chalk Circle, M. Butterfly, Ma Rainey's Black Bottom, Yellowman, Playboy of the West Indies and The Glass Menagerie, and more than 75 productions in theaters across the country.
