It’s hard to believe we’ve nearly reached the climax of our 2017/18 season here at Arena Stage. The last six months have brought such insightful, stirring and joyful work to our stages. They have taken us from our own backyards in the timely comedy Native Gardens to the Cherokee lands in 1830s Georgia with Sovereignty. We have been to a rundown New York City apartment, the Sleep-Tite Pajama Factory, Japanese Internment Camps and the White House. To round out the season, we will take you to the vast frontier of my native home Alaska with the season finale, the world-premiere musical Snow Child.

Today, we take you to Memphis Lee’s diner in 1960s Pennsylvania and welcome the return of August Wilson to Arena Stage. A Pulitzer Prize-winning playwright, Wilson is a true icon of the American theater. His 10-play cycle charting the African American experience in the historic Hill District of Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania through each decade of the 20th century is a work of unmatched mastery in storytelling. With each play we are introduced to fresh characters, situations and ideas that are bursting with grit, resilience, humor and humanity.

Wilson’s work has been a feature of Arena Stage’s seasons for many decades dating back to 1987 with our production of Joe Turner’s Come and Gone, Wilson’s play set in the 1910’s. We followed that up with Fences (1950s) in 1990, Ma Rainey’s Black Bottom (1920s) in 2002, The Piano Lesson (1930s) in 2005, Gem of the Ocean (1900s) in 2007 and King Hedley II (1980s) in 2015. Last year saw a resurgence of Wilson’s work with the opening of the acclaimed Tony Award-winning production of Jitney produced on Broadway by Manhattan Theatre Club as well as the release of the Academy Award-winning film adaptation of Fences featuring Denzel Washington and Viola Davis.

We are thrilled to partner with our sister theater on the west coast, the excellent Seattle Repertory Theatre, under the able Artistic Direction of Braden Abraham, to bring this play to life. This production also marks a rare occurrence for Arena Stage with one of our co-productions moving from the more traditional proscenium space at Seattle Rep to the round. This achievement could not have been possible without the skillful hand of director Juliette Carrillo, an alum of our Allen Lee Hughes Fellowship program, as well as a company of first-rate actors and designers from New York, Washington D.C. and Washington state. Together, they bring the great work of August Wilson to life.

Where else but Arena can you see artists at the top of their craft producing works by America’s most celebrated playwrights?

See you at the theater,

Molly Smith, Artistic Director

Driven by our core value to “serve artists; the national, regional, and local communities; and theater through effective partnerships and collaboration at the most sophisticated and professional levels”, Arena Stage is honored to bring Two Trains Running to Washington D.C.

This production is an effective partnership with Seattle Repertory Theatre in Seattle, Washington. The opportunity to partner with another theater on the other coast can be a wonderful collaboration. Artists from both Seattle and Washington are exposed to new audiences and experiences. For Arena artists it is exciting to work with colleagues from another area nationally that exude the same passion for bringing a work to life. The two theaters partner on resources, from building the physical production to the performers. A nice benefit is a cost savings to both theaters, but the real benefit is shared by both audiences who get to see great work from around the country.

On the hometown front, Arena has a variety of partnerships and relationships that serve artists and our community. Our Georgetown University partnership, generously supported by trustee Andrew Ammerman, allows us to connect local college students with the artists working at Arena as well as giving the students—who are budding theater artists and practitioners themselves—valuable experiences during their training and education. In the case of Two Trains Running, Georgetown University Associate Professor, Dr. Soyica Diggs Colbert, and her students provided dramaturgical support for the literary office and had the opportunity to engage with the artists at a rehearsal. Arena also hosts an annual Military Thanksgiving, which provides the opportunity to show our appreciation to our military friends and families locally. With Arena only a few short blocks away from Fort McNair and the Navy Yard, this is an obvious partnership. Members of the military from around the Washington-area are invited to a family dinner followed by a performance on the day after Thanksgiving, when so many of them are not able to visit their extended families because of their service.

The partnerships we engage in can extend past the scope of what is done artistically on our stages. By securing support from local, regional and national corporations, we are able to present the highest quality work for our audiences. Two Trains Running is generously sponsored by PNC Bank, a financial institution headquartered in Pittsburgh, the setting of August Wilson's plays. August Wilson is their local hero and it's meaningful to us that they are proud to be affiliated with such a great artist. We are grateful for the support of the many individuals, companies and philanthropic organizations that ensure the vitality of this 68-year young institution.

Thanks for reading,

Edgar Dobie, Executive Director

As we celebrate Molly’s 20th season with Arena Stage, we reflect on the landmark opening of the Mead Center for American Theater on October 25, 2010. Designed by acclaimed modernist architectural firm Bing Thom Architects, Arena’s new home embodies the heart of its mission— inclusion, ambition and boldness. Arena Stage at the Mead Center for American Theater is named after visionary benefactors and Life Trustees Dr. Jaylee M. Mead and the late Gilbert Mead, who pledged $35 million towards the project—the largest gift ever from a single household to a not-for-profit regional theater. The soaring structure has anchored Arena Stage as a leader of American theater, while catalyzing the revitalization of Southwest Washington D.C.

“Maybe there really are no second acts in American lives, as F. Scott Fitzgerald famously pronounced. But the lives of American theaters are a different story. On Oct. 23—after seven years in planning, three years in constructing and $135 million in financing—the 60-year-old Arena Stage, a star of regional theater in the U.S., will make its debut in reconfigured, expanded digs with a longer name, Arena Stage at the Mead Center for American Theater, and a larger mission.

‘It really is a rebirth,’ says Molly Smith, Arena’s artistic director since 1998.

Everything about the venture is bold: Three performing spaces (increased from the original two), two large rehearsal rooms, commodious concession stands, a classroom, a café, a rock garden, tiered lobbies, administrative offices, conference space and supporting shops (costume, scene, set, props, laundry). And all of it housed in an ultramodern structure featuring 35,000 square feet of soaring glass panes that wrap around the complex like a transparent curtain hanging from a cantilevered roof.”

— The Wall Street Journal

“I, too, sing America” asserts the speaker in Langston Hughes’s poem “I, Too,” as he, “the darker brother,” makes room to sit at the national table and tell his story. August Wilson, like the speaker in Hughes’s poem, too told the story of America from the perspective of the darker brother. For Wilson, weaving the story of black working class people into the national narrative offered insight into the difficulty of gaining equal protection under the law. His theater, therefore, advanced freedom by offering examples of black people creating innovative responses to oppressive conditions. Throughout his artistic career, Wilson advocated for the development and autonomy of black theaters. He also called for black directors of his plays, recognizing the paucity of integration of America’s theaters on stage and behind the scenes. He knew the story of black Americans needed to be told and accounted for if America were ever to uphold its promise.

Two Trains Running, Wilson’s play for the 1960s, resonates profoundly with contemporary debates about gentrification and urban development in its focus on the possibilities for and the road blocks to economic uplift. By the end of the decade, Americans wanted improvements in their living conditions. People of color and women sought greater economic autonomy through access to institutions of higher education and wider representation in all sectors of labor. They also sought to occupy roles that had been customarily reserved for white men. Greater integration in society not only meant the freedom to choose but also the financial means to make a choice.

Similar to today, in 1969, many Americans felt permanently excluded from the national story. Two Trains Running demonstrates the historical turning point that precipitated our current conditions of wealth disparity. In Wilson's work, growth, personal or economic, requires dealing with the past. Whether that's financial debt or personal ones, the bill must be paid in order to move forward. Moreover, in order to build something new (i.e. a relationship or career), the characters must confront the past. Wilson's cycle offers historical, familial, social, political and economic lessons. Two Trains Running has a deeply economic one but it would be a mistake to divorce the message from the artistic medium of theater. Wilson, at the end of the day, left his art to sing America.

Dr. Soyica Diggs Colbert is Chair of the Department of Performing Arts, Director of the Theater and Performance Studies Program, and Associate Professor in the Department of African American Studies at Georgetown University. She served as Dramaturg on this production, courtesy of the Georgetown University-Arena Stage partnership supported by Trustee Andrew Ammerman.

Her more than 30 directing credits at Arena Stage include Sovereignty, Carousel, Oliver!, The Originalist, Fiddler on the Roof, Camp David, Mother Courage and Her Children, Oklahoma!, A Moon for the Misbegotten, My Fair Lady, The Great White Hope, The Music Man, Orpheus Descending, Legacy of Light, The Women of Brewster Place, Cabaret, South Pacific, Agamemnon and His Daughters, All My Sons and How I Learned to Drive. She most recently directed Our Town at Canada’s Shaw Festival. Her directorial work has also been seen at The Old Globe, Asolo Repertory, Berkeley Repertory, Trinity Repertory, Toronto’s Tarragon Theatre, Montreal’s Centaur Theatre and Perseverance Theater in Juneau, Alaska, which she founded and ran from 1979 – 1998. Molly has been a leader in new play development for over 30 years. She is a great believer in first, second and third productions of new work and has championed projects including How I Learned to Drive; Passion Play, a cycle; Next to Normal; and Dear Evan Hansen. She has worked alongside playwrights Sarah Ruhl, Paula Vogel, Wendy Wasserstein, Lawrence Wright, Karen Zacarias,
John Murrell, Eric Coble, Charles Randolph-Wright and many others. She led the re-invention of Arena Stage, focusing on the architecture and creation of the Mead Center for American Theater and positioning Arena Stage as a national center for American artists. During her time with the company, Arena Stage has workshoped more than 100 productions, produced 39 world premieres, staged numerous second and third productions and been an important part of nurturing nine projects that went on to have a life on Broadway. In 2014, Molly made her Broadway debut directing The Velocity of Autumn, following its critically acclaimed run at Arena Stage. She was awarded honorary doctorates from American University and Towson University.

EDGAR DOBIE (Executive Director) Born in Vernon, British Columbia, a village next to the Rocky Mountains (three years after Arena had its first performance in 1950), I am one of five brothers raised by my Dad — Edgar, a mechanic and small businessman — and Mom — Connie, a telephone operator and union organizer. I am the only Dobie to make a career in theater. Luckily for me, drama was an elective I was offered at the tender age of 12, so I hung up my hockey skates and joined the drama class, led by teacher Paddy Malcolm and her fledgling Powerhouse Community Theater after school. By the time I graduated from high school, we volunteers had built ourselves a 200 seat fully-equipped theater on its own piece of land in the center of town and found a sell-out audience for the full season of plays we had to offer. That experience taught me so many lessons about the power of theater to foster collaboration and share meaningful stories, as well as the public values that attach themselves to building a safe place where everyone is welcome. All those lessons served me well as a managing leader and producer both sides of the border, and both sides of the commercial and non-profit theater divide. Arriving here at Arena in 2009 makes me feel like I am well-equipped for the best job in the world.

This theater operates under an agreement between the League of Resident Theatres and Actors’ Equity Association.

The actors and stage managers are members of Actors’ Equity Association, the Union of Professional Actors and Stage Managers in the United States.

The scenic, costume, lighting and sound designers in LORT theaters are represented by United Scenic Artists, Local USA-829 of the IATSE.

The Director and Choreographer are members of the STAGE DIRECTORS AND CHOREOGRAPHERS SOCIETY, a national theatrical labor union.

THANK YOU FOR LEAVING YOUR LEGACY AT ARENA STAGE

CREATE A LEGACY BY JOINING THE FULL CIRCLE SOCIETY

You don’t have to be wealthy to make a significant gift. Bequests and other planned gifts allow you the opportunity to make a significant contribution that will ensure the future of Arena Stage. The Full Circle Society allows us the opportunity to recognize you for that gift during your lifetime. For more information about making a planned gift or to inform us of your existing planned gift, please contact Holly Oliver at 202-600-4029 or holiver@arenastage.org.

“We feel the long-term viability of theater really has to come from two sources—annual fundraising efforts and long-term donations [in the form of a planned gift] from the people who love the theater and are willing to commit to it in perpetuity.”

— Beth Newburger Schwartz and the late Richard Schwartz
