ARENA STAGE ANNOUNCES
MOLLY SMITH’S FINAL PRODUCTION AS ARTISTIC DIRECTOR

“MY BODY NO CHOICE”

MONOLOGUES FROM EIGHT OF AMERICA’S MOST EXCITING PLAYWRIGHTS
REFLECT ON WOMEN’S CHOICES PAST, PRESENT, AND FUTURE

Washington, D.C.—Arena Stage at the Mead Center for American Theater today announced Molly Smith’s final production before she steps down as Artistic Director: My Body No Choice, which features monologues from eight of America’s most dynamic female playwrights on women’s choices on the autonomy of their bodies.

In a deliberate nod to the voting age of 18—one of the most important milestones in a young person’s life—this limited engagement of My Body No Choice will run for just 18 performances in the Kogod Cradle, from October 20 through November 6, in the run up to the mid-term elections. Press night will be held on Thursday, October 20, at 7:30 pm. In addition, all tickets are priced at $18. General admission tickets are available now at arenastage.org/mybody.

“To say I was devastated when Roe v. Wade was smashed by the Supreme Court is an understatement,” said Smith. “With the clock being turned back 50 years, women are once again second-class citizens in the United States of America. After reading voraciously about the decision, I knew that I had to quickly make a theater piece that provided a forum for the shared experience of what this decision feels like to lose this important choice.”

My Body No Choice will explore the importance of bodily autonomy, from the ability to choose—or not—to have an abortion, to the freedom to choose one’s body size, to making a decision around when to end one’s life. The short stories are both fiction and non-fiction by eight of America’s most exciting female writers, who are: Lee Cataluna (Home of the Brave), Fatima Dyfan (Woolly Mammoth Theatre New Work Fellow), Lisa Loomer (Roe), Dael Orlandersmith (Stoop Stories), Sarah Ruhl (In the Next Room, or the vibrator play), Mary Hall Surface (Perseus Bayou), V (formerly Eve Ensler) (The Vagina Monologues), and “Anonymous.” These tremendous artists and their monologues represent a rich diversity of theatrical storytelling and personal experiences.

“Women need to tell their stories,” said Smith. “For far too long, women have been afraid to tell their stories, particularly about abortion. The national conversation around gay rights changed dramatically when people came out to their families, friends, and neighbors. Suddenly everyone knew someone who was gay, and being gay was normalized.”
“Now, women need to change the conversation around choices that are being made for them, around the autonomy of their bodies in large part by people who have no experience of what it is like to be a woman. We need to tell our stories; it’s past time.”

“When Molly reached out to me, I said of course I would be happy to help with this important initiative. I had been thinking along the same lines and hadn’t put pen to paper yet,” says playwright Sarah Ruhl. “This moment in America is an all hands on deck situation; artists, thinkers, activists, providers, patients, politicians—we ALL need to do our part to create visibility around the importance of women’s health and reproductive justice for all people in a post-Roe world. It is a nightmarish situation.”

As an important part of this production, Arena Stage invites all women, trans, and non-binary individuals from all over the United States to share their stories about choices and their bodies, in videos of up to 2 minutes in length. Up to 18 videos will be showcased on Arena Stage's digital media properties, extending the experience of My Body No Choice long after the lights have come down and the run has ended. Learn more and submit your story at arenastage.org/mybody.

The full creative team and casting will be announced at a later date.

PLAYWRIGHT BIOGRAPHIES (in alphabetical order)

Lee Cataluna is hard at work on a piece for Arena Stage's Power Plays series, writing about the bloody riot that followed the surprising results in the election of Hawaii's last king. Her play Heart Strings, which tells a story about a chosen family using traditional Hawaiian string figures, is currently in production at Atlantic Theater. Lee's other work includes Sons of Maui for San Francisco Playhouse, What the Stars See at Night for La Jolla Playhouse, and Home of the Brave for La Jolla Playhouse's POP Tour. She was born on Maui, is part Native Hawaiian, and has an MFA in Creative Writing from UC Riverside. www.leecataluna.com

V (formerly Eve Ensler) is the Tony Award-winning playwright and author of the Obie Award-winning theatrical phenomenon The Vagina Monologues (translated into 48 languages and performed in 140 countries), along with many other plays. She is the author of a number of books including her latest bestsellers The Apology (translated into more than 15 languages) and In the Body of the World, as well as the New York Times bestseller I am an Emotional Creature. She starred on Broadway in The Good Body, and most recently Off-Broadway at Manhattan Theatre Club in the critically acclaimed In the Body of the World. During the COVID-19 pandemic she helped create That Kindness: Nurses in Their Own Words, a tribute to nurses presented by Brooklyn Academy of Music in accordance with theaters all across the country. Film credits include The Vagina Monologues (HBO), What I Want My Words to Do to You (Executive Producer, PBS), and Mad Max: Fury Road (Consultant). She is founder of V-Day—the 23-
A 10-year-old global activist movement which has raised over 120 million dollars to end violence against all women (cisgender and transgender), those who hold fluid identities, nonbinary people, girls, and the planet—and founder of One Billion Rising, the largest global mass action to end gender-based violence in over 200 countries, as well as a co-founder of City of Joy. She writes regularly for The Guardian.

“Anonymous” is a D.C. Metro-based artist who is honored to have her work at Arena Stage, and honored to be in the company of extraordinary sister playwrights. She has chosen to remain anonymous to highlight how private and personal our choices are. She has chosen to have her voice heard to highlight the need for all women to speak their truths in their own ways at this critical juncture in human history. Pain is personal and powerful. Pain is both private and political.

PRODUCTION INFORMATION

My Body No Choice

Monologues by Lee Cataluna, Fatima Dyfan, Lisa Loomer, Dael Orlandersmith, Sarah Ruhl, Mary Hall Surface, V (formerly Eve Ensler), and “Anonymous”

Directed by Molly Smith

In the Arlene and Robert Kogod Cradle I October 20 – November 6, 2022

ABOUT:

In June 2022, reproductive rights took a giant leap backwards when the U.S. Supreme Court overturned Roe v. Wade. In the United States, we can drive when we turn 16, and vote when we turn 18. But we no longer have the bodily autonomy to make the choices that will impact us the most.

In My Body No Choice, Molly Smith's final directorial venture for Arena Stage, eight of America’s most exciting female playwrights share what choice means to them, through the telling of fiction and non-fiction stories rooted in personal experience; theirs or a friend's. Because this is a time when women need to tell their stories.

Support for My Body No Choice is provided by The Artistic Director Fund and Sue Henry and Carter Phillips.
